Six Steps Proposed. Dr. Andrews' report proposes six steps for the prevention of unemployment. Regularization of industry, establishment of public employment exchanges, systematic distribution of public work, prevention of absorption of surplus labor, unemployment insurance, and constructive care of the unemployable are the six propositions. "Public work," says the program. Home 6440 'should be made to act as a sponge absorbing the reserves of labor in bad years and slack seasons and setting them free again when the demand for I have an unlimited supply of money to them increases again in private bus-> the report. The report recommends that business men establish employment departments in their plants, take up the planning of output ahead, offer inducements for slack season trade and endeavor to eliminate "seasonal unemployment." At the same time employes are advised to encourage adjustments through short-time and overtime agreements rather than by discharge of part of the force, and to demand pay for overtime work so as to discourage it. Limit Child Labor. To prevent or absorb the surplus of labor, the program recommends the limitation of child labor, thorough industrial training, a constructive pollay of regulating and distributing immigration, and the regulation of working hours of adults. Municipal, state and federal public employment agencies are strongly recommended in the report. For all those who still remain out of employment after these steps are taken, although they are able and willing to work, the report proposes unemployment insurance such as is in operation in England since 1913. Outof-work benefits by trade unions, either assisted or not assisted by publie contributions, and a national system of public unemployment insurance, are suggested as possible meth-The report points out in addition, that when all these steps have been taken, there still remains the problem of the unemployed, including those Word has been received here of the who are sick, aged, inefficient, feeble death in Elkhart Wednesday morning minded, or semi-criminal, as well as of Oscar Little.
